Equally it is important to disclose any risks perceived to fall outside of the identified risks covered in the insurer's policies. Also it is important to take up additional insurance coverage where the valuation of assets, buildings and equipment exceed the capped values in the AMSA insurance policy.

To assist Members, AMSA has developed workplace health and safety publications in consultation with its insurer which are available for Member use.
- 12.2. These publications reflect AMSA's policy to take a common integrated system approach to managing safety throughout Men's Sheds which incorporates statutory as well as the common law principles. Such an approach simplifies administration and ensures that the need to replicate tasks is kept to a minimum and that the key elements of risk management, providing adequate instruction, training and accreditation, together with record keeping and continuous improvement are carried out.
